

Federico Lauria is a postdoctoral researcher and lecturer at the University of Lisbon. He investigates emotions from an affective science perspective with a special focus on desire, musical emotions, self-deception, epistemic emotions, and grief. He was researcher at the University of Geneva (where he obtained his PhD), Columbia University, New York University, and the Cognitive Science Center of Neuchâtel, among others. He edited the collection The Nature of Desire (OUP, 2017) with Julien Deonna.
